Tuxedo Park Christian R. Sonne 2007 Wall Street titans, robber barons and scions of blue-blooded colonial families made Tuxedo Park synonymous with upper-class living in the first three decades of the 20th century. This gated Hudson Valley community only forty miles north of Manhattan is listed on the National Register of Historic Places in recognition of its distinctive Gilded Age mansions designed by well-known architects. Normally not accessible to the public, now, through 230 commissioned color photographs and fifty vintage postcards presented in a beautifully designed ¿coffee table¿ cloth edition, the natural beauty of Tuxedo Park, bejeweled by historic houses sited to take brilliant advantage of the mountainous terrain and splendid views of three lakes, and its rich social and architectural history, is available for the first time for all to share.

Tuxedo Park Jennet Conant 2013-10-15 The untold story of an eccentric Wall Street tycoon and the circle of scientific geniuses he assembled before World War II to develop the science for radar and the atomic bomb. Together they changed the course of history. Legendary financier, philanthropist, and society figure Alfred Lee Loomis gathered the most visionary scientific minds of the twentieth century—Albert Einstein, Werner Heisenberg, Niels Bohr, Enrico Fermi, and others—at his state-of-the-art laboratory in Tuxedo Park, New York, in the late 1930s. He established a top-secret defense laboratory at MIT and personally bankrolled pioneering research into new, high-powered radar detection systems that helped defeat the German Air Force and U-boats. With Ernest Lawrence, the Nobel Prize-winning physicist, he pushed Franklin Delano Roosevelt to fund research in nuclear fission, which led to the development of the atomic bomb. Jennet Conant, the granddaughter of James Bryant Conant, one of the leading scientific advisers of World War II, enjoyed unprecedented access to Loomis' papers, as well as to people intimately involved in his life and work. She pierces through Loomis' obsessive secrecy and illuminates his role in assuring the Allied victory.

Tuxedo's Tales Tuxedo Hess 2015-08-28 "My name is Tuxedo and this is my debut children's book. I am a Criollo horse, originally from Argentina, but I was rescued by my Mum and bought back to the UK from Malaysia."

Tuxedo's Tales will take children on a magical adventure spanning a year in the Sussex countryside. They will learn new words and their meanings, and appreciate how important family and friendships are. At the end of each chapter is a Pearl of Wisdom which will teach good behaviour, respect and consideration, as well as a few of life's ethics and morals. "The other thing is, I'm a real horse – I do exist." Tuxedo is alive and kicking enjoying his retirement being cuddled, groomed, going for leisurely rides and enjoying lots of carrots. "So, enjoy my tales of adventure and meeting my countryside friends, I hope you enjoy reading it as much as I did writing it." Think of characters with kind eyes, soft coloured drawings; think of a modern-day Beatrix Potter and you have Tuxedo's Tales – a unique children's book for those aged 5-9 years old. As Tuxedo was rescued, a percentage of the profits of Tuxedo's Tales will be going towards Horse Welfare so they can help other horses to have a happier life.

My Tuxedo No Longer Fits Robert Ballard 2008-09-09 My Tuxedo No Longer Fits is a book written by one who grew up in the 1950's and 1960's in a small textile village of rural Western North Carolina. I have recorded a bit of historic information concerning the mill, the mill village, the people in and around the village and the business enterprises located within the confines of this small community. The stories and tales are at times hilarious and sometimes render a sad theme. In this volume I share quite candidly some family issues that have caused embarrassment and heartache as well as some of the good times in my growing up process. The people of Tuxedo and the ones that I had the privilege to grow up with and have interaction with are some of the best on the planet. Written in simple a vernacular this is a fun book to read.

Tuxedo Tales Martha Muetzel 2011-11 Retired from a career as a country barn cat, eighteen year old Tuxedo recalls her past adventures in delightful short tales from catching a thief to a garden rescue. Whimsical and clever, the cat's own stories are further enriched with those told to her by other animals she refers to as "four-leggeds". Descriptive details acquaint the reader with country life and nature and draw scenes of the shoeing of the horse, the feisty squirrel in the pine boughs, the frolicking maple leaves in autumn, and the desperate cat in the frozen woodland. More deeply, the thoughts and emotions expressed by the simple "four-leggeds" draw laughter and perhaps a tear from young readers and adults alike.

How To Wear A Tuxedo Ronnie Conable 2021-08-04 A tux is a fancy black suit that you might wear, along with a bow tie, to your senior prom or your wedding. The word tux is a common North American shorthand for a tuxedo. If you're invited to an elegant party that's "black tie only," that means you're expected to wear a long, dressy gown or a tux. You have seen the Tuxedos being worn by many including your favorite movie stars like Jackie Chan as he acted in The Tuxedo, Fred Aster in the early films, or other fictitious movie characters like James Bond. You may have even worn one before, during, your prom event, or as a groomsman or had even worn it during your wedding day. But have we know where this very American formal wear originated? Or why it is called the Tuxedo?

Tuxedo Park Past: Law And Disorder Stuart J. McGregor 2019-10-11 Pierre Lorillard was a member of the well-known wealthy family who made a fortune in the tobacco business in the 18th century. Tuxedo Park was a planned recreational community created by Pierre Lorillard III approximately 38 miles north of New York City in 1886. This very private community was populated by the wealthy and social set of the Gilded Age. The jacket named the "Tuxedo" originated at The Tuxedo Club. What started as a private hunting and recreational preserve with a clubhouse and wood cottages morphed into a gated, fenced with barbed wire, exclusive colony of grand estates for the rich and social elite. It was another place to play between their mansions in New York, summers in Newport and winter months in Palm Beach. Security and privacy together with money and social status were the cornerstones of this gated and fenced community. Originally, a retreat for the spring and fall months with a New Year's tradition, Tuxedo Park soon became a year-round residence for bankers, financial leaders, and captains of the industry during the Gilded Age and their families from the 1880's through the depression. This presentation touches on just one of those families and life in the early decades of the 20th century. While the country watched and read about this small community and their aristocratic lifestyle, they also learned the residents behind the iron gates were suffering the same insecurities of many others in the country due to the industrialization and population growth that spread from the great cities of the new growing America.

The Matter of the Duct Tape Tuxedo Steve Levi 2019-06-15 Captain Heinz Noonan, "Master of the Impossible Crime," is called upon to solve the most puzzling of riddles. If it's odd, you call Noonan. Why, for instance, would someone steal 200 garden gnomes and then leave them in a pattern across a city? Better yet, how can air cargo increase in weight as it flies and how can a century old Tong highbinder warrior appear in a locked warehouse and then disappear in a cloud of smoke? And why would anyone want to steal anything from a garbage dump? See if you can solve these unusual mysteries faster than the "Bearded Holmes" of the Sandersonville Police Department. Oh, then there is the theft of 8,000 gallons of water, a reappearing coelacanth, the theft of some Komodo dragon trousers and, of course, a missing duct tape tuxedo. The perfect Who dun what for your bookshelf and enjoyment.

Ensley and Tuxedo Junction David B. Fleming 2011-01-17 With dreams of building a vast steel production operation, Memphis planter Enoch Ensley founded a city in the wooded valley at the heart of Jefferson County, Alabama. He named the city Ensley, after himself, and established the Ensley Land Company to acquire and develop 4,000 acres for industrial facilities and a town. As field workers left their farms to work in steel mills and businesses sprang up on the valley floor, Ensley became a diverse place of hopes and desires. A strong community of churches, businesses, civic clubs, and neighborhoods developed around the factories and railroads. Jazz music was the social thread of Ensley's African American community, known as Tuxedo Junction. Musicians such as Erskine Hawkins famously mastered the style. The annexation of Ensley into Birmingham established the "Magic City" as the largest and wealthiest in Alabama and the heart of the Southern steel manufacturing economy.
